

The Super Awesome Guide to Long-Term TRAVEL

Have you been thinking about traveling long-term, but don't know where to start? Follow these helpful tips and you'll be on your way to making the leap!

Before You Leave

Start Saving NOW

We estimate that by saving 15% of your income, in two years you'll be able to travel for up to three months job free.

Airline Miles + Bonus Points

Make your credit cards work for you.

Quit Your Job (or Take It Along)

If you're waiting for the "perfect time," you may never go. Try not to burn any bridges and remember: wifi is your friend.

Pack Up Your Life

Go paperless and don't forget about storing your precious thimble collection somewhere safe.

Planning the Trip

Decide What You Want To Do FIRST

Find something amazing to do or see, then figure out where it is (not the other way around).

Know Your Options

Is it better to drive, fly, or swim?

Book What You Can in Advance

Don't fall for backpacker hype. Wandering around for a day trying to find a place to sleep is not fun.

Try Sublets and Shared Spaces

Staying with a local can be fun and informative.

Making it Count

Be Your Own Tour Guide

Do what YOU want to do, not what's on everyone else's "Must See" list.

Stay Longer, Do Less

You can see a heck of a lot by doing nothing at all. Take your time and let it all soak in.

When in Rome...

Do as the locals do. Try something new. Just say, "I'll have what he's having," and enjoy!

Bend Like Gumby

If you lost a bag, missed a bus, or whatever... stuff happens. Just roll with it and maybe you'll have a good story to share one day.

Don't be afraid, take the leap... and be amazed by our world countless times!
